Scottsdale Healthcare is among the top 50 health systems in the U.S., according to a Thomson Reuters study published in last month's Modern Healthcare magazine.

Top institutions in the study had lower mortality rates, fewer medical complications, fewer patient safety incidents, and shorter average hospital stays than peer organizations.

"This recognition is a benefit for our community and a tribute to the teamwork at all levels of our health system, from the leading local citizens on our board or directors to our management, doctors, nurses, volunteers and other staff members in each of our hospitals,"

Scottsdale Healthcare President and CEO Tom Sadvary said in a statement.

The study, "100 Top Hospitals: Health System Benchmarks Study," analyzed clinical quality and efficiency at 255 U.S. health systems with two or more hospitals. Analysts used data from the past three years taken from two public databases.

Scottsdale Healthcare is the not-for-profit parent organization of Osborn Medical Center, Shea Medical Center, Thompson Peak Hospital, Virginia G. Piper Cancer Center, Scottsdale Healthcare Research Institute, Scottsdale Healthcare Community Health Services, NOAH Clinics, Scottsdale Healthcare Home Health Services and Scottsdale Healthcare Foundation.
